

MYSORE gold NUGGETS coffee

Next to the South-Indian city of Mysore (from where our name comes from) lay thousands of hectares of land used to grow coffee; this land is where our coffee is produced. Indian coffee – as everything in India – has a legend. Once upon a time, there was a Sufi saint called Baba Budan who went on a pilgrimage to Mecca from his homeland: India. On the way to his destination he stayed in Mocca, a harbor of Yemen, where he got introduced to this dark and sweet drink that was called Quahwah. He liked it so much that he decided to take some with him back home. However, back in those days Arabians were very protective with their special plant, so Baba Budan had to strap seven mocca coffee beans on his chest so he can smuggle them to India. Upon arriving he planted the beans on the hills of Chandragiri, in the state of Karnataka and this has established coffee production in India. Now the hill is named as Baba Budan Hill in respect to the legend.

Mysore Gold Nugget is a name representing excellence, as the growers take special care and attention when hand-picking the coffee beans. These rare Arabica beans are medium roasted and the roasting suits this rich, chocolatey, sweet and fruity taste. The coffee made of Mysore Gold Nugget beans has low acidity and can be enjoyed in the afternoon too thanks to its naturally low caffeine. With the comfort of knowing the origin of the mysterious coffee, sit back and let this smooth Indian specialty steal your heart.
